Dear Mr. Galbraith,

Thank you very much for your prompt reply to my letter of the 26th.

I do hope the opportunity for our talking affords itself before too far into the future, for I am deeply concerned about the great potential for additional national distress that is possible and, I think, imminent. I also fear the possibility for national hurt through involvement of the family of the late President. Ultimately, if it is not now apparent, I think this will be clear to you.

Meanwhile, if you know one who should be informed and will take the time, please let him or me know.

If you have read only WHITEASH, you have read only part of the story. I have published three additional books, have the fifth ready for publication, and have researched the two that I think will conclude the series. (List enclosed.)

What I have discovered in writing ROSE KORTEN, on the autopsy and what relates and what of it was suppressed, especially worries me.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
